On The Way

The Theological Virtues: Already and Not Yet

Central to the virtue of hope is the reality of Christianity's already and not yet. That is, there are certain elements of our Faith that are already accomplished and present while we still await others. So, Christ has already come in humility and service; he has not yet come again in glory. Our redemption is already won; our salvation is not yet secured. We already have the grace of Christ; we do not yet have the glory. We already have the pledge of salvation; we do not yet have the full payment. Indeed, Saint Paul refers to God's gift of the Holy Spirit God's as a deposit, something already present but not yet the full payment.

Hope draws confidence from all that Christ has already done, promised, and entrusted to us. These are not vain expectations but present realities: his life, death, and resurrection; the Sacraments and teachings of the Church; most of all, his abiding presence. They all convey that what we hope for is already with us, and thus certain.

But hope is the virtue of the wayfarer, of the pilgrim who has not yet reached his destination. He has a real pledge of that glory, but he must continue trusting in the promises of the One who has gone to prepare a place for him. Christ has not yet brought his promises and graces to fulfillment. We still have to attain what he has promised.

This hope characterizes our Eucharistic devotion. Saint Thomas Aquinas describes the Eucharist as "the pledge of future glory." Yes, Christ is truly present: body and blood, soul and divinity. When we look upon the consecrated Host, we see Christ himself. At the same time, he is not yet present in his glory. We do not yet see him face to face. Eucharistic adoration should bring both the peace of his presence and the longing to see him as he is.

Scripture's description of hope as an anchor follows this same line of thought. "We have this as a sure and steadfast anchor of the soul, a hope that enters into the inner shrine behind the curtain, where Jesus has gone as a forerunner on our behalf" (Heb 6:19-20). It's an odd kind of anchor, which provides both stability (already) and movement (not yet). Because it looks to what God has already done, hope provides us something certain – "sure and steadfast." But because it "enters into the inner shrine behind the curtain" – that is, into heaven – it draws us to where we have not yet arrived. Hope anchors us already in that place we have not yet reached.

The already/not yet also helps us to understand the two vices contrary to the virtue of hope: presumption and despair. Each of these emphasizes either the already or the not yet to the exclusion of the other. So, presumption is the vice by which we expect salvation and glory without striving and sacrifice. We conclude that since Christ has already accomplished and given us such gifts, there is no need for our efforts. The work is already done. He has done it so that we don't have to. Despair, on the other hand, is the vice by which we confuse not yet for never. Because his work in us is not yet complete, there's no hope for us. He can't save us.

Hope walks along the high wire between these two extremes. It brings the peace of knowing all that God has done for us. At the same time, it inspires the striving for the fulfillment and completion of all that he has promised.

– Fr. Scalia

A Women's New Study

All women in the parish are invited to join the Wednesday Women's Bible Study of St. Paul's "Letter to the Ephesians" beginning January 22nd from 10:00am-11:30am in the Knecht Conference Room. Bring your Catholic study Bible and join a lively group as we read and discuss the writings of this brilliant and passionate disciple of Jesus.

If you have questions or are interested in participating, please email Jane Harvey at harveyjmc@gmail.com.

Adorers Needed!

The exposition of Jesus in the monstrance leaves Christ vulnerable and must be properly always attended. Since He is exposed out of love for us, it is our duty to make sure He is protected. For that reason, at least one person must be in the church while He is exposed.

The parish needs regular adorers to sign up for one hour or half hour shifts on the days and times below. We offer Adoration every Wednesday and Thursday from 12:30pm-8:00pm.

Email Julie Marx, juliemarx14@gmail.com, with questions or to sign up.
