On The Way

A Catechesis on Marriage: Indissolubility

Suppose you go to a wedding and at the exchange of vows the bride looks lovingly at the groom and says, "I take you to be my husband...for the next five years, after which time we will assess our assets and debts, come to an equitable arrangement, and go our separate ways." Would you rejoice in her practicality and shrewdness? Probably not. You would recognize immediately that what was happening was not a marriage but some other kind of contractual arrangement.

We all intuit that marriage is for life, and with good reason. Permanence or indissolubility is of the very nature of conjugal love and of marriage. It's not a uniquely Catholic teaching, not some added requirement of the Church, but simply the truth about what marriage is. If a bride and groom don't intend permanence, then they don't intend to marry. They want some other kind of union instead. Permanence is a consequence of the spouses giving themselves to one another. A gift cannot be conditionally or temporarily given. If the gift of self in marriage isn't permanent, then it's not a gift at all but a loan.

The romance and beauty of marriage and married love come from the fact that a man and woman, not knowing what the future holds, commit themselves to one another for better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness and in health, until death. Remove permanence, and marriage becomes just another arrangement "until further notice." And that's not so romantic.

Permanence in marriage is also for the sake of the children. The union of husband and wife brings children into the world. That union also provides the best environment for the children's development and success. That is, the union of mom and dad is not just the source of the children's life once, at conception, but also the continuing source of strength and nourishment for them. As should be obvious by now, divorce is dreadful for children. It is, in effect, the putting asunder of their source of life.

Remember, this teaching is the Church's because it is Jesus's first. His words on the permanence of marriage are as shocking now as they were then: "Have you not read that from the beginning the Creator 'made them male and female' and said, 'For this reason a man shall leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and the two shall become one flesh'?" So they are no longer two, but one flesh. Therefore, what God has joined together, no human being must separate" (Mt 19:4-6; cf. Mt 5:31-32; Mk 10:2-12). Divorce was permitted under the Mosaic law as a concession to their "hardness of heart." Christ restores the original meaning of marriage as indissoluble because he brings to spouses the grace to live that truth.

Christ the Bridegroom proclaims the indissolubility of marriage not only because it brings some temporal benefits but also because it points to a supernatural reality. The indissoluble bond of husband and wife points to the eternal covenant between Christ and the Church. The proclamation of the Gospel depends on people's having some lived experience of stable and lasting love. Unfortunately, because of divorce fewer and fewer people have such an experience. By persevering in marriage – through better and worse, richer and poorer, sickness and health – spouses become an icon of that everlasting love. They make it, in a certain sense, present and real. Thus, they witness to the everlasting love with which God loves us.

“The Virgin Mary - and the Role of Women in the Church”

Parish Speaker Series with Sister Marie Benedict Elliott, FSE

Monday, January 30th, 7:00pm in Monsignor Heller Hall

What is a woman? That has become the controversial question over the past several years. Our Lady provides the definitive and lasting response. Join us for our next parish speaker this Monday evening, January 30th at 7:00pm, to discuss the meaning of woman, as exemplified by the Blessed Virgin Mary, in the Church and the world today.

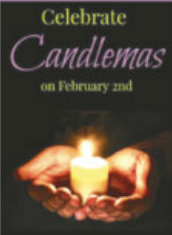

Sister Marie Benedict Elliott is a Franciscan Sister of the Eucharist living with her Community at St. Philip Parish in Falls Church. She earned a Master's degree in theology from Holy Apostles College and Seminary. After teaching at a Catholic high school for six years, Sister Marie Benedict is pursuing further study in theology at the Catholic University of America and working in St. Philip Parish's Youth Ministry.
