On The Way

A Catechesis on Confession: Why Confess?

The fact that Jesus Christ himself gave us the Sacrament of Penance should be enough for us to know its essential role in the Christian life. But that doesn't eliminate the question Why? As many people ask, Why do we have to confess our sins to a priest? Why can't we just confess individually and directly to God? These are good questions that deserve answers.

The answer to that last question – Why can't we confess to God directly? – is that we can. In fact, it should be the daily practice of every Catholic to make an examination of conscience, acknowledge one's sins before God, and ask forgiveness. This is not the same as sacramental confession. But the Sacrament doesn't make much sense (or do much good) outside of it. Again, the Sacrament of Penance only makes sense within the broader context of a life of penance.

Still, the question about sacramental confession remains. Why did our Lord give us this Sacrament? The answer touches on the nature of man, sin, and the Church.

First, human nature. As the Divine Physician, Jesus knows perfectly what our fallen human nature needs. Confession is suited to it. First, it answers our need for accountability. We know that human reason can easily become rationalization. We can downplay certain sins, making them appear less grave than they actually are. In Confession an internal auditor examines our work and makes sure we haven't low-balled our sins.

The opposite is also true. We can often exaggerate ("catastrophize") our situation and see our guilt as greater than it is. Again, the confessor's role is to help us see things clearly, so that we don't assume more guilt than we should. Such accountability brings about the formation of conscience, so that we think in deeper union with Christ and his Church.

Further, the Sacrament of Confession answers our need to know that we are forgiven. The certainty that we desire isn't something that we can produce on our own. The Church teaches that peace is one of the effects of a good confession precisely because when we make a good confession we hear those words, "The Lord has freed you from your sins..." That statement is not wishful thinking or even a sincere hope. It's the guarantee of the Church to the penitent.

Second, the social nature of sin. Sin is intensely personal. We are not guilty for one another's sins. But that doesn't mean sin doesn't have a social dimension. When we sin, we hurt not just ourselves but others as well. Every sin introduces a certain disorder into the human family. This is clear with certain sins, such as gossip or theft. But even the most interior sins cause this harm because we are so closely united. This applies especially in our relationship with brothers and sisters in the Church, which brings us to the last reason for Confession...

The nature of the Church. Union with Christ is inextricably bound to union with the Church. We have no union with Christ except through the Church. The Eucharist – the source and summit of our faith – unites us not only with Christ but also with one another as his Body. So also, our sins harm our union not only with him but also with the Church. Logically, then, we need to be reconciled not only with Christ but also with his Body. For that reason, the priest in the confessional acts as a minister of Christ and a minister of the Church.

New Mass Intentions Policy

We are blessed to have a large number of people requesting Mass intentions. Unfortunately, we have more requests than we can satisfy in a reasonable time (i.e. within one year). Therefore, we are now limiting the number of Mass intentions granted to 12 per year per household. This is to help keep Mass times open to accommodate more requests. In addition, the “Pro Populo” Mass, the Mass for all parishioners required to be offered every Sunday and Holy Days of obligation, will be offered at set times on those days.

The new policies for Mass intentions are as follows.

- Requests for Masses are limited to 12 Masses per year per household.
- The calendar will be open for 12 months at a time.
- The 10:30am Sunday Mass and 8:30am Holy Day Mass will be reserved as the Pro Populo Mass.

Church Restroom Locations Will Be Switched

Renovation of the church restrooms is nearing completion! This past week we began installing the new tiles.

Once the restrooms are completed, you will notice a major location change:

- the men’s restroom will be on the right as you enter the church
- the women’s restroom will be on the left.

We had to make this switch for architectural reasons. We will repeat this message when the renovated restrooms become available for use.
